IIT Gandhinagar, Archaeological Sciences Centre

In December 2012, IIT Gandhinagar (IITGN) set up an Archaeological Sciences Centre to promote and facilitate multidisciplinary research in archaeology and allied scientific disciplines. Several research projects, including multidisciplinary investigations of the Harappan site of Dholavira and palaeoclimatic investigations of northern Rajasthan through palaeobotanical remains from the Harappan site of Karanpura, are currently under way.

IITGN invites applications from highly talented candidates for faculty positions in archaeology and allied disciplines. Experience in the scientific aspects of archaeology will be desirable. Selected candidates will be expected to show initiative in research and publication. To apply for the position or for further information visit us at <http://www.iitgn.ac.in/job.htm>

IITGN's Archaeological Sciences Centre also invites highly talented scholars working in the discipline of history of science and technology, with a special focus on India, for faculty positions at all levels. Solid grounding in Sanskrit and in mathematics or science is desirable. To apply for the position or for further information visit us at <http://www.iitgn.ac.in/job.htm>
