

Coordinator Health & Environment

We are setting up a team for policy research, awareness raising and advocacy in the field of environmental health.

Centre for Science and Environment (CSE) is an established environmental NGO. Environmental changes in terms of growing pollution and degrading natural resource base are leading to threats to public health. The purpose of the CSE team is to keep the nation informed about these threats and push for policy changes.

If you are an eclectic scientist or social scientist with a multidisciplinary bent of mind, fire in your belly, good writing and analytical skills, and one who likes to keep abreast of latest developments, then you are just the kind of person we are looking for. The work involves coordinating a biannual report on the state of environmental health and networking with the medical community. We need:

- Team Coordinator: With at least eight years experience in related fields and a track record of having managed a team of researchers. The total emoluments of the candidate, depending on experience and qualifications, will be equivalent to that of a professor in the Indian Institute of Technology.
- Research Associate and Research Assistants: With two to five years experience in related fields.
