Advertisement for the post of the Centre Director, NCRA

The Tata Institute of Fundamental Research invites applications for the position of Centre Director at its National Centre for Radio Astrophysics (NCRA), Pune, India. NCRA is one of the leading groups worldwide in low frequency radio astronomy. It has built and operates the Giant Metrewave Radio telescope (GMRT) at Khodad, a premier facility used extensively by the international community. NCRA runs a vigorous research programme, as well as a graduate school with courses in Astronomy and Astrophysics. The Centre Director has overall responsibility for the progress and growth of the scientific and technical programmes at the Centre, including national and international linkages. Applicants are expected to have proven strengths both in research and in managing a large facility with its own research programmes. They can consult the URL <http://www.ncra.tifr.res.in> for a more detailed account of NCRA's activities, and write to director@tifr.res.in by 10 August 2009 with appropriate supporting material, which will be examined and processed further by a search committee.
